History of the Copper Brook Name

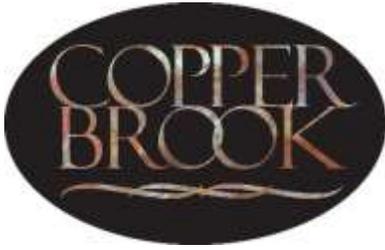

Of all the settlers who came to the Granby during the onset of copper mining and iron making in 1723, the most notable was Samuel Higley. By the spring of 1733, Samuel Higley had begun mining copper on his own property. Since Colonial times Higley has been associated with the Connecticut copper tokens first produced in 1737 making him the first minter of copper coins in the English America.

Roughly five varieties of Higley Coppers pictured either an antlered deer, broad ax, a trio of sledge hammers with a crown above each, the word Connecticut, a pointing hand, or a combination of these all which are indigenous to the Granby area can still be found on display at the Connecticut State Library.
